the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 85 and over has increased by 0.5 million.

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop services to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that services are of high quality; (3) to ensure that services are cost-effective; and (4) to ensure that services are sustainable.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become an important employer of people with mental health problems.

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The Department of Health (1996) has published a report on the mental health of public sector employees, which states that 'the mental health of public sector employees is a public health issue'. The report also states that 'the mental health of public sector employees is a public health issue'. There is a growing awareness of the need to develop services to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a vision for the future of health care for older people. This vision is based on the principle that older people should be able to live in their own homes for as long as possible, and that health care should be provided in a way that is respectful of their dignity and autonomy.

The Department of Health (1999) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this vision. These include: improving the quality of care; ensuring that care is person-centred; and ensuring that care is accessible to all older people. This paper will discuss the challenges of providing care for older people in the community, and will explore some of the ways in which these challenges can be met.

The challenges of providing care for older people in the community are many and varied. One of the main challenges is the need to ensure that care is person-centred. This means that care should be tailored to the individual needs and preferences of each older person. This can be a challenge because older people often have complex needs, and their needs may change over time.

Another challenge is the need to ensure that care is accessible to all older people. This means that care should be available to older people who live in rural areas, and to older people who have physical or mental health problems. This can be a challenge because older people often have limited mobility, and it can be difficult to provide care to them in their own homes.

A third challenge is the need to ensure that care is of high quality. This means that care should be provided by staff who are trained and qualified to provide care for older people. This can be a challenge because there is a shortage of staff who are trained and qualified to provide care for older people.

There are a number of ways in which these challenges can be met. One way is to develop services that are person-centred. This can be done by involving older people in the design and delivery of services. Another way is to ensure that care is accessible to all older people. This can be done by providing care in a range of settings, including in older people's own homes.

A third way is to ensure that care is of high quality. This can be done by ensuring that staff are trained and qualified to provide care for older people. This can be done by providing training and support for staff, and by monitoring the quality of care. These are some of the ways in which the challenges of providing care for older people in the community can be met.
